“ My heart breaks since learning that Dickie passed. The reason that he was a top-notch carpenter was because he was a top-notch human being. I'll miss his stories...he was one Heck of a story teller. For some reason I always felt like a better person after having spent time with him. My deepest sympathies to the Williams family.

“ Dickie started off as a customer, but turned into a good friend for 25 years. I was hoping for another 25 years of friendship and story telling. Dickie was a true craftsman in carpentry and wood working. He allways went above and beyond on every project he took on. I will miss our long talks we had on and off jobsites. The story might start off with a hunting or truck rebuilding story, but he would allways get around to how proud he was of his boys. I know Tyler and Kyle will carry on Dickies Legacy by being Honest-Christian-Gentlemen. Dickie was loved and will be missed by many. God now has another great carpenter in heaven. Look out Jesus, this new guy is a perfectionist. Until we meet again Dickie. Your Friend & lumber salesman, Ernie Bottoms.

“ My deepest condolences to Dickies family and friends. I got to know Dickie through my husband, Dickie built his first house. Over the years I have had many conversations with Dickie as he shared his life stories. Dickie loved his family and friends and I don’t think there is anything he wouldn’t do to help someone in need. I will miss talking to him and laughing with him. When ever he was over he would tell me 3-4 times he needed to go but would always share another story with me always leaving 30 minutes later than he planned. My husband and I loved Dickie Williams and will miss him terribly.
