“ Though Amaya's life was short lived, she touched so many hearts, to know her was to love her. I knew the moment I set my eyes on her that she was too beautiful for this world and GOD was not going to allow her to stay. She had a heart of a warrior and a soul of an angel. I watched her fight for four months, and despite the thought of losing her was unbearable, watching her suffer over and over was intolerable. There came a point when I knew I had to make peace with the fact that she had grown weary and I had to let her go. Amaya, you took a part of my soul when you left, but, I'd rather bare the pain of losing you than watch you suffer for another second. My heart may be broken now, but, I know, I will hold you again, someday. I love you Amaya Ari.
Love, mommy
