I watched you suffer,
I saw you die, but all I could do was sit close by you. You went away, we had to part,
God eased your pain but broke my heart.

“ I'm sorry your obituary was written the way it was. It's so hard to sum up a life in just one paragraph. Especially when grief and shock are still so fresh ,you were someone so great to me . You deserved more than words could ever really say. I love you now and forever ,till me meet again

“ It’s been one year since you left, and yet it still feels like yesterday. Grief is strange—it changes, but it never truly leaves. Some days, I can move with it. Other days, I still feel frozen in the moment I lost you.

I miss your voice, your laugh, your steady presence. I talk to you often, hoping somehow you still hear me. So many times I’ve reached for you, only to remember that you’re not just in the next room—you’re in my heart now, and everywhere I go.

This year has been full of moments you should have been part of. And though time has moved on, part of me is still learning how to keep going without you.

*I love you. I always will.
And today, I remember not just the day you left—but all the days we shared.*

“ Jesse,
I don't know where to start. You were my friend, my lover, my soulmate. We had a wonderful life together.
I will miss those eyes, the way you kissed me every time you enter or left the house, the lunch time calls, just to tell me you loved me. I will miss the laughter we shared, right up to the end. And we laughed everyday.
I just wanted to Thank You for loving me so unconditionally. You know you were my Hero. I don't know what I did to deserve you, You gave me my best life, I Love you so very much all my heart .

“ Prayers to the family... this definitely took me down memory lane... on Meadow Creek Drive... growing up with the Jewels down the street, hanging out with friends. I am really sorry to hear of Jesse's passing after fighting such a cruel disease.

“ Sherry, Jesse had a great sense of humor and a love for our REDSKINS. His biggest love was for you and your Cowboy loving daughter Lori. Throughout life he was always behind you but always in arms length laughing and smirking about what you did or said. Now he is above you as your Angel and you will hear his voice of wisdom. Keep strong and remember he is watching over you.
