“ Ray was a "In whatsoever state I am" kind of man. He was the first to testify that God is faithful. I heard him say that more than once and you knew that he must have had times to prove that attribute and be impressed enough to try and model his life by it.

I remember a gleam in his eye, like the sparkle of a diamond in the light you knew that love couldn't hide or be contained there. This was most noticeable when he and Carol would walk into church together. Then as soon as he saw Angela, Jennifer and Victoria that gleam would dance with delight.

Ray would never brag but it must have made him very proud to know that he has a son that walks with God. He must have found great comfort in knowing that Rob could and would responsibly assume his new role as head of the family.

Ray and I knew each other only a short time, but it seemed like we became instant friends. He was never judgmental or looking to find fault but simply wanted to make sure you knew that it was important to him that you were okay.

I will continue to pray for all in the family as they deal with the sadness of his departure here. We lost a gentle giant of a man with his home going. I can only imagine a loving welcome for him in paradise and one glad morning a happy reunion for us all.
